Clinical Nurse Specialists

Each patient has a key worker; your key worker will be a Clinical Nurse Specialist and will be the main link between you and the hospital. Your keyworker will liaise with other healthcare professionals on your behalf if you request it. They will also give you other information that you need such as contact details for other areas of service.

Please don't hesitate to contact your key worker when you feel you need to ask questions about your situation and/or care plan.

Types of Skin Cancer Treatment

Surgery

Most skin cancers can be cured with simple surgery, this will be carried out at the Royal London Hospital and you should be given a date within two weeks.

Radiotherapy

Radiotherapy is a treatment involving the use of high energy radiation. If needed, this will take place at St Bartholomew's Hospital.

Chemotherapy

Chemotherapy comes in different forms including injections directly into the vein, tablets and creams. Creams are the most common type of chemotherapy treatment used. Your dermatologist will give you specific information and instructions on how to use these creams.

Who should I contact for advice and support?

Monday-Friday 9am-5pm (excluding bank holidays):
Please contact your Keyworker.

For chemotherapy and radiotherapy advice please contact the relevant units directly.
